A Brief History of Peanuts

The first Peanuts strip was printed on Oct. 2, 1950, and Brown and Snoopy even went to the moon in 1969, appeared in seven newspapers. In the strip, Cartoonist Charles Schulz's famous character, Charlie Brown, walks by two friends, one of whom remarks, "Well! Here comes 'ol Charlie Brown! Good 'ol Charlie Brown ... yes, sir! Good 'ol Charlie Brown ... how I hate him!" By the end of the decade, Peanuts had been picked up by hundreds of newspapers and had won Schulz a Reuben award, the highest honor given by the National Cartoonists Society.

fingerprints on everything it touched. Charlie Brown and the gang even graced the cover of TIME in 1965. After Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated in 1968, Schulz added a black character; Franklin first appeared highest honor given to a civilian. To this day, kids on July 31 of that year. Peppermint Patty, a multidimensional, sports-loving girl living in a singleparent household, made her debut in 1966. And Woodstock, Snoopy's yellow, feathered companion, finally got his name in 1970.

Peanuts triumphed off the printed page as well. In 1965 A Charlie Brown Christmas first aired, beginning a string of televised specials. Two later specials, You're a Good Sport, Charlie Brown and A Charlie Brown Thanksgiving, both took home Emmy awards. In 1967, Snoopy and friends hit the stage in an off-Broadway production, You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown, which ran for four years. It remains one of the most performed American musicals in history. Charlie after the Apollo X crew named their command and lunar modules after them. In later decades, Schulz's work graced the Louvre and Carnegie Hall.

Schulz's health began to deteriorate in the 1990s. His hands developed a tremor, leaving his classic lines wobblier than usual. He suffered a stroke in November 1999 that impaired his vision, memory and motivation to draw. On Dec. 14, 1999, he announced his retirement. On Jan. 3, 2000, the last Peanuts daily strip Schulz's Peanuts exploded during the 1960s, leaving its was published. Schulz died of complications from colon cancer on Feb. 12, one day before his final Sunday strip hit the presses. He was 78. Schulz was posthumously given the Congressional Gold Medal, the around the world know and love Snoopy.
